

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Hazel T. Biana is a faculty member at the Department of Philosophy, De La Salle University in Manila, Philippines, and a Research Fellow at the Southeast Asia Research Center and Hub (SEARCH) and the Social Development Research Center (SDRC). She is a former Vice President of the Philosophical Association of the Philippines. While she specializes in feminist philosophy and cultural criticism, her academic work extends also to the study of Korean dramas (K-dramas) and their cultural intersections.

hazel.biana@dlsu.edu.ph

Pavel Drábek is Emeritus Professor of Drama and Theatre Practice, University of Hull, Associate Professor at Hradec Králové University and Researcher at the Czech Cultural Institute, Prague. He is a theatre scholar, playwright, librettist and translator, the Head Dramaturg of the Authors' Reading Month and a programme curator of the Prague Quadrennial. He has written on theatre theory, early modern theatre history, and drama translation and adaptation.

paveldrabek024@gmail.com

Bogdan Florea is a professional actor and researcher in theatre studies at the University of Bristol. His Duignan bursary-funded PhD thesis was entitled "Actor in a Second Language." He is co-founder of Nu Nu Theatre, a theatre company engaging with professional actors who use English as a second (non-native) language. He presented academic papers at universities in the UK, Finland, Switzerland, Poland, Denmark, Ireland, Norway, USA, Germany and Lithuania. He is an Associate Member of the Brokering Intercultural Exchange Group, and member of the American Society for Theatre Research, International Federation for Theatre Research, European Association for the Study of Theatre and Performance, and Society for Theatre Research. He published in academic journals in the UK, USA, Lithuania, Poland and Germany.

bf0028@bristol.ac.uk

Libuše Heczková is Associate Professor at the Faculty of Arts, Charles University, Prague. Her fields of interest include literature and cultural history of the twentieth century, gender studies, literary theory and didactics of literature. She is the author and co-author of books on modern literature, history and feminism, including "No scientific field is inherently closed to women": The Complicated Paths of Women to Scientific Careers in the First Half of the 20th Century (with M. Bahenská and D.

Musilová; 2023) and a co-author of the history of twentieth-century Czech literature, A History of New Modernism (the penultimate, fifth volume published in 2022).
libuse.heczkova@ff.cuni.cz

Mírka Horová is Senior Lecturer in English at the Faculty of Arts, Charles University, Prague. She is the Editor of the Byron Journal and has published widely on the poet, including essays on heroic transformation (Routledge, 2016), the Italian dramas (MUP, 2017), Lucretius (CSP, 2018), the Satanic School (CUP, 2019), swimming (LUP, 2019), dramatic experimentation (CUP, 2023), and the metaphysical dramas (OUP, 2024), alongside essays on play theory in Romantic drama (Litteraria Pragensia, 2020), agonism and empire in Iain M. Banks's science fiction (AUC Philologica, 2022), and the rhetoric of Brexit (Litteraria Pragensia, 2021). She has co-edited several books and special journal issues. Her research interests include British Romanticism, play theory and Brexit. She is an Advisory Board member of the International Association of Byron Societies (IABS), and among the international collaborators of the Inter-University Center for the Study of Romanticism (CISR).
miroslava.horova@ff.cuni.cz

Alice Koubová is Senior Researcher at the Institute of Philosophy, Czech Academy of Sciences and the leader of the Systems of Resilience team at the Systemic Risk Institute. She is also Associate Professor at the Academy of Performing Arts in Prague and co-investigator on the Horizon INSPIRE project, which focuses on art-based participatory approaches. She has published works on resilience, political psychology, performativity, ethics and artistic research with publishers including Routledge, Brill, Camden, PUF, Bloomsbury, wo-men, NAMU and Filosofia. She has written several devised theatre performances and frequently contributes to the Czech public sphere through articles and discussions.
alicekoubova@seznam.cz

Tim Noble is Associate Professor in the Ecumenical Institute of the Protestant Theological Faculty of Charles University, Prague. Apart from degrees in theology and philosophy, he has also studied English Literature and Media Studies. He researches in the area of Latin American liberation theology, with his most recent book working closely with the thought of Ernesto Laclau and Chantal Mouffe. He has also published on theology and culture, both film and literature.
timnoble@tiscali.cz

Hana Pavelková is Lecturer at the University of Chemistry and Technology, Prague, where she teaches in the Department of Economics and Management. Her PhD, completed at Charles University in Prague, focused on monologues in contemporary British and Irish drama. She specialises in the translation of contemporary English-language drama. She also contributes to Czech theatre magazines, and actively collaborates with leading Czech theatres, opera houses, and literary and film festivals as a translator. Among her recent translations are Charlie Josephine's *I, Joan (Já, Johan*a*, 2023) and the English-language edition of the complete librettos of Bedřich Smetana's operas (Bedřich Smetana & OPERA, 2024). She is currently working in tandem with Pavel Drábek on a Czech adaptation, Spanilá jízda, based on George Farquhar's The Beaux' Stratagem (1707) and Hannah Cowley's The Belle's Stratagem (1780) for the Janáček Academy of Music and Performing Arts in Brno.

hana.pavelkova@gmail.com

Ondřej Pilný is Professor of English and American Literature and Director of the Centre for Irish Studies at Charles University, Prague. He has published widely on modern and contemporary Anglophone theatre and Irish literature, and has translated into Czech works by a range of Irish playwrights as well as fiction by Flann O'Brien, Samuel Beckett and Michael Crummey. His recent publications include Ireland: Interfaces and Dialogues (ed. with Radvan Markus, Daniela Theinová and James Little; 2022), the article "Community and Manipulation in the 'Parallel Worlds' of Tim Crouch," Journal of Contemporary Drama in English 12.1 (2024), and a chapter in Sean O'Casey in Context (ed. James Moran; Cambridge UP, 2025).
ondrej.pilny@ff.cuni.cz

Martin Procházka is Professor of English, American and Comparative Literature at the Faculty of Arts, Charles University, Prague. He is the author of Romanticism and Personality (1996), Transversals (2008) and Ruins in the New World (2012), a co-author of Romanticism and Romanticisms (2005), an editor of twenty collaborative books, and the founding editor of the academic journal Litteraria Pragensia. He is a member of Academia Europaea.
martin.prochazka@ff.cuni.cz

Valeriya Sabitova is a PhD candidate at Charles University, Prague, specializing in the interplay of body and violence within visual arts, theatre and performance. Her research, inspired by works of Francis Bacon, Kara Walker and Sarah Kane, examines the embodiment of violence through sensation and affect. She has published on Kara Walker's silhouette installations and Francis Bacon's portraiture, and presented papers on theatre, photography and performance at numerous international conferences. Valeriya has also taught interdisciplinary courses on contemporary drama, performance and cinematic body horror, focusing on the body through an interdisciplinary lens.

valeriya.sabitova@ff.cuni.cz

Kateřina Svatoňová is Professor at the Film Studies Department, Faculty of Arts, Charles University. She has long been involved in media theory, history and philosophy, media-archaeological research of (Czech) modernity, changes in the perception of space and time in visual culture, parallel history of cinematography and the relationship between film and other media. She has curated several exhibitions on the history of film and media and edited special issues of academic periodicals. Her books include 2 ½ D: Prostor (ve) filmu v kontextu literatury a výtvarných umění (2 ½ D: Film Space in the Context of Literature and Art, 2008), Odpoutané obrazy: Archeologie českého virtuálního prostoru (Loose Images: An Archaeology of Czech Virtual Space, 2013) and Mezi-obrazy: Mediální praktiky kameramana Jaroslava Kučery (Inter-images: Medial Practices of Cinematographer Jaroslav Kučera, 2016) for which she received the F.X. Šalda Award. She is a co-author of The Dictator of Time: (De)contextualizing the Phenomenon of Laterna Magica (2019) and Ester Krumbachová (2022).
katerina.svatonova@ff.cuni.cz

Martin Štefl received his PhD from the Department of Anglophone Literatures and Cultures at Charles University, Prague in 2014, where he studied English Philology and Philosophy. Currently, he works at the School of Business of the University of Chemistry and Technology in Prague, where he teaches courses in English, focusing on ESP and skills training, in particular on critical thinking, but also philosophy of technology. In addition to his research interests, Martin works as a translator and has extensive experience teaching and designing educational content for non-profit educational organisations.
martin.stefl@vscht.cz

Clare Wallace is Associate Professor at the Department of Anglophone Literatures and Cultures at Charles University, Prague. She has written widely on Irish and British theatre. Her books include The Theatre of David Greig (2013) and Suspect Cultures: Narrative, Identity and Citation in 1990s New Drama (2007), and Performing Crisis in Contemporary British Theatre edited with Clara Escoda, Enric Monforte and José Ramón Prado-Pérez (2022). She is a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Contemporary Drama in English and the research project "Gender, Affect and Care in Twenty-First Century British Theatre" funded by the Spanish Ministry of Economy and Competitiveness.
clare.wallace@ff.cuni.cz